I. INTRODUCTION (Title Times New Roman, 12 font size, bold)

Current literature regarding the work subject should be examined and the differences of the said work from the past, similar works should be presented clearly in the introduction section.

II. STATEMENT OF THE PROBLEM

A research problem may be characterized as a point of contention, a gap in existing knowledge, or a divergence from the norm or standard that indicates the need for more understanding and inquiry. The ultimate objective of a problem statement is to transform a broad, undefined problem to a specific, well-defined one that can be handled via focused study and deliberate decision-making.

III. LITERATURE REVIEW

A literature review examines books, academic articles, and other sources pertinent to a certain subject, field of study, or theory, and gives a description, summary, and critical assessment of these works in relevance to the research problem at hand.

IV. RESEARCH QUESTIONS

The research questions are the questions that a study or research is attempting to address. This question frequently refers to an issue or a problem that is addressed in the study's conclusion through analysis.

V. METHODOLOGY

The technique must be presented clearly and thoroughly, with adequate references. The authors shall explain clearly the study topic, the research framework, and the methods used. Additionally, it should be stated why the research question is relevant to theory and practice, as well as why the method(s) chosen are appropriate for the situation.

VI. IMPLICATIONS

Authors must evaluate the research's possible implications for theory or practice and reiterate what the research seeks to contribute to current knowledge on the subject.

VII. REFERENCES

References should be listed in alphabetical order and presented in a commonly accepted format but in a consistent style. The references should follow the American Psychological Association (APA) format. The use of any other referencing format such as the Chicago format with footnotes is not allowed.
